FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS:

What does the Strategic Alliance Agreement mean to OSRL Members?

- The Strategic Alliance is a framework agreement through which OSRL and WWC acknowledge the benefits of cooperation to improve overall capability in preparing for and responding to subsea incidents in the industry. Both companies agree to work together to provide OSRL subscribers access to the combined expertise of OSRL and WWC in terms of planning, exercises, and response to subsea source control incidents.
- The two companies will work together in an ongoing effort to share technical and operational information to provide a seamless, coordinated response to any subsea well control event involving the deployment of OSRL equipment.
- OSRL subscribers now have collaborative access, via their OSRL membership, to WWC for detailed planning and engineering services such as:
    - Source Control Emergency Response Plans
    - Capping Stack Interface Check
    - Capping Stack Installation Plans
    - Logistics Plans
    - Sea Fastening Plans
    - Shallow Water Capping Plans
    - Capping Stack Shut-in Plans
    - Emergency Response Services
    - Relief Well Services
    - Engineering Analysis
    - Well Control Engineering Services
    - CFD modeling for Capping Stack Landing Analysis and Subsea Plume Modeling.
    - Well Control Training

What does the Strategic Alliance mean in terms of equipment access?

- The Strategic Alliance agreement does not have any impact on Equipment Access Agreements.
- OSRL Clients only have access to the equipment for which they signed up for with OSRL. They do not have access to Wild Well Control Equipment unless they have an existing Equipment Access Agreement (EAA) in place with Wild Well Control – WellCONTAINED.
- Wild Well Control – WellCONTAINED Clients only have access to the equipment included on their EAA. WellCONTAINED members do not have access to OSRL equipment under the Strategic Alliance agreement. WellCONTAINED Clients would only have access to OSRL equipment if they contracted directly with OSRL for access.

Does the Strategic Alliance signal any future changes in terms of equipment access?

- The Strategic Alliance agreement does not have any impact on Equipment Access Agreements, nor does it signal any future changes with regards to equipment offerings. There are NO plans to merge the equipment packages of OSRL and WWC, nor are there any current plans to make future joint equipment package offerings.
